

Contact: Muhammad Sultan
UMT Road, C-II, Johar Town, Lahore-54770
Phone: +92 42 35212801-10
UAN: 111-300-200
Cell: 0324 4920078
Email: muhammad.sultan@umt.edu.pk Web:
<http://www.umt.edu.pk/sas/home.aspx>

Department of Anthropology

School of Advanced Studies

The cutting edge of knowledge

M.S. Cultural Anthropology
B.S. Anthropology

University of Management and Technology, UMT Road, C-II, Johar Town, Lahore.
UAN:+92 42 111 300 200, Tel.:+92 42 35212801-10, Fax: +92 42 35184789
Email: admissions@umt.edu.pk

Anthropology

The School of Advanced Studies (SAS) at UMT offers undergraduate and graduate degree programs in anthropology with an aim to develop a dedicated seat of learning in Lahore. These programs are intended to produce high quality scholarship through emphasis on cutting edge theory and ethnographic research. Under SAS, these programs are intended to generate a regular flow of research to help policy makers and organizations refine their policies and interventions.

Who should study Anthropology?

Anthropology is ideal for people interested in exploring new cultures, societies, languages, and the diversified nature of human species. Candidates with background in social sciences, liberal arts and humanities can benefit from these programs, which are embedded with supervised fieldwork research.

Why Anthropology

Among social sciences, anthropology stands out prominently because:

- It is holistic and comparative
- It studies the diversity of mankind in time and space – biologically, socially and culturally
- It is well-equipped to understand global issues and offers practical solutions to complex problems
- It enables its graduates to excel in their respective fields

Career Opportunities

Anthropology graduates go on to take up research and teaching positions at universities apart from serving on policy panels, government departments and agencies, non-government organizations, private businesses, independent research institutes, community organizations, service organizations, museums, and the media; while others work as independent consultants and research staff for the UN agencies, and the World Bank.

BS Anthropology MS Cultural Anthropology

BS-Anthropology

The four-year BS Anthropology program at UMT promises thorough and versatile training in the discipline, with specialization in key areas such as health, environment, religion, media, education, and business and administration. This extensive degree will provide cross-cultural learning and acquaint students with various facets of anthropology, besides training them in ethnographic research through semester-long fieldwork in their respective area of specialization.

Areas of specialization: Health, Environment, Religion, Media, Education, and Business and Administration

Program Summary

Admission requirement: 12 years of education

Intermediate or A-Level

Duration: 04 years

Semesters: 08

Credit Hours: 133

Program Type: Morning

Total Fees: Rs. 300,000

MS-Cultural Anthropology

The M.S. in Cultural Anthropology at UMT is tremendously broad in scope. It is very useful for both students and experienced professionals seeking advanced learning. Its wide range of courses cover specialized training in areas of public health, law, environment, politics, development, art, gender, to name a few. This program will launch its graduates into their respective professions and provide them a significant edge over their peers through its superior quality training.

Program Summary

Admission requirement: 16 years of education (BS or MA/MSc) of education with a degree in social sciences, humanities or liberal arts disciplines.

Duration: 02 years

Semesters: 04

Credit Hours: 30 (24 + 6) (Coursework 24 Credits + Thesis 6 Credits)

Program Type: Morning/Afternoon

Total Fees: Rs. 200,000