PFL donates books to UMT's Learning Resource Center

The UMT Library plays a pivotal role in harnessing socio-cultural, socio-intellectual and socio-academic aspects at UMT by offering a broad compass of public programmes and vigorously engaging people from all walks of community. Noteworthy individuals and esteemed organizations are invited to support the dignified cause of knowledge dissemination in variety of ways, incorporating through philanthropy, sponsorships and volunteering. Our strategic thrust is to join hands and seek partnerships to achieve specific goals

Pakistan Foundation London (PFL), a learning partner of UMT Library, has donated nearly 2,500 books to UMT's learning Resource Center (LRC). This donation is a part of LRC's on-going drive to equip UMT with current and relevant learning resources. The Pakistan Foundation London is a London-based charity organization, and has been supporting education in Pakistan for many years. PFL helps UMT to build dynamic knowledge society by contributing learning resources, thus helping country to integrate education into national economic strategies and policies. Its strategic thrust is to develop holistic and balanced education systems.

The education program of PFL also addresses the needs of Non-government organization working for the cause of free education. The major areas of PFL are to take measure for capacity building of education sector and improve quality of education.

The partnership between UMT Library and PFL involves strengthening education that is responsive to the socio-economic needs of the country. The PFL has donated 7,000 books to UMT's LRC since 1999. The donated books cover a wide range of topics including economics, English literature/ fiction, marketing and management, science and information technology, reference books, social sciences, art and designing, sports, and a special collection on Law. The Audio visual Section of LRC was also donated by PFL. The PFL aims to cooperate and collaborate with LRC in the future also.

The recently donated books have been processed and are ready to be shelved in the special area designated for PFL collection. The addition of these knowledge resources to LRC's collection will definitely enrich the learning process of all learners.

Muslim vs Islamic / by Jan-e-Alam Khaki

Friday, 17th May, 2013

WHEN writing about the history of Muslims or history of issues related to Muslim societies, there is nowadays a tendency to call this entire area of study 'Islamic' without much thought as to the use of this important epithet.

For example, in modern times, particularly in the Indian subcontinent, there is a strong tendency to call all Muslim histories 'Islamic history'. Noted scholars have contested this subtle subversion leading to radicalisation or to an attitude that is characterised by exclusivist tendencies.

Interestingly enough, when classical historians wrote histories, they tended to use more neutral titles than 'Islamic' or even 'Muslim' in their history texts.

For example, the pioneering historian Ibn Ishaq termed his history book Kitabul Magazi al-Nabawiyya (The Book of Wars of the Prophet PBUH) without the use of the word 'Islami' or 'Muslim'.

Similarly, take the example of Al Baladhuri's Ta'reekh al-Buldaan. It translates as 'The conquests of cities' not 'The Islamic conquests of cities'. These and many other examples of history texts tend to demonstrate that historians were very careful about how to title their works and showed great care in making these decisions.

However, in contemporary times, particularly in the Indian subcontinent, there has developed a tendency to show all caliphs and sultans, governors and generals as 'Islamic' heroes. This leads us to ask: what exactly is the difference between calling something/somebody Islamic or Muslim? And how does this make a difference?

Islamic denotes something/ somebody as mandated by Islam or having Islamic credentials to reflect Islamic character. The word Muslim, on the other hand, denotes an individual who happens to be a Muslim. It does not show what that individual did that was Islamic.

What this does is that it allows historians and scientists to be relatively free to discuss, examine and judge that person's acts of commission and omission. When a strong epithet of Islamic is added to a concept or a person, it immediately exalts the entity to a 'sacred' status and makes it difficult if not impossible to examine it/him/her critically, using or applying the conventions of historical analysis/critical discourse analysis.

Interestingly enough, now this epithet (Islamic) is being used with so many personalities or concepts that practically anything done by a Muslim 'hero' or a ruler becomes sanctified and he/she becomes infallible. This appears quite contrary to the historical epochs that we call formative.

Even the common man or woman would question the caliph(s) about the truthfulness or otherwise of their actions. We see a different practice there. In earlier times, they used more natural, non-judgmental, non-religious and neutral terms to denote and describe the important personalities of their age or what they did.

Many notable writers have argued that by having a tendency to refer to acts by Muslims as Islamic justifies what they did and sanctions the act in religious terms, which creates many historical and intellectual problems.

Also, it is argued that this approach has tended to develop myths about history and historical personalities. Often, this tendency leads to an approach of 'everything being perfect'. What then happens is that a set of myths are developed around a set of propositions or personalities that shroud and conceal the truth.

Particularly, history as a science of study of the past becomes a casualty because the study of history in such approaches then becomes more or less theology, or even may turn out to be devotional literature, having no characteristics of history.

This tends to lead to a loss of status for history, leading to loss of trust in the writer. History, among other things, is all about examining, critically analysing and studying the events or personalities of the past in a scientific way.

It is, therefore, no surprise that many of the scholarly students of history at advanced levels of their training tend to prefer more 'serious' historical literature mostly written in the academically advanced countries rather than in developing countries.

Exceptions apart, many history books written in Muslim countries, including Pakistan, methodologically, structurally, and content-wise leave much to be desired.

Some history books are even sprinkled with curses and abuses for personalities whom the writers did not like or approve of. Such is the sad story of some of the writers of our history in many Muslim societies.

One reason why this tendency seems to have developed is that history is approached as a tool to justify sectarian or ideological positions and defame others. The purpose is not finding the truth in history but using history to justify theological positions based on their assumptions and interpretations of history, which might be called 'theologised' or 'ideologised' histories.

Many other nations also tend to do this in the name of nation-building, which may be called nationalised histories. As opposed to this phenomenon, one can find versions of history written by many Muslim writers who have tried to investigate history from a more objective position trying to draw so-called scientific conclusions.

One such marvellous example is that of Ibn Khaldun. Today, Ibn Khaldun is seen as a shining example of this trend where he tries to study history not as theology, but as a science, an objective study of history without attaching any epithet.

In sum, writers should use the terms 'Islamic' or 'Muslim' discerningly which can prevent standardisation of everything Muslims do or don't do in a particular society at a particular time and in a particular context.

The writer teaches Histories and Cultures of Muslim Societies at a private university in Pakistan.

Home Page of Springer Link:

The screenshot shows the Springer Link website interface. At the top right, there are links for 'Sign up / Log in', 'English', and 'Academic edition'. Below the Springer Link logo is a search bar with a magnifying glass icon and a settings gear icon. A navigation bar contains 'Home' and 'Contact Us'. The main content area is divided into three sections:

- Browse by discipline: A vertical list of subject areas with blue arrows pointing to the right, including Architecture & Design, Astronomy, Biomedical Sciences, Business & Management, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences & Geography, Economics, Education & Language, Energy, Engineering, Environmental Sciences, Food Science & Nutrition, Law, Life Sciences, Materials, Mathematics, Medicine, Philosophy, and Physics.
- Providing researchers with access to millions of scientific documents from journals, books, series, protocols and reference works. This section includes two book covers: 'CHEMICAL PAPERS' and 'Applied Demography and Public Health'. A purple callout box states: 'New books and journals are available every day.'
- Recent Activity: A section titled 'What's being read within your organisation' showing an article titled 'Suitable internal control genes for qRT-PCR normalization in cotton fiber development and somatic embryogenesis' from 1 month ago.

Getting Started:

Go to the Library website: <http://library.umt.edu.pk/index.html> and select the database you want from the Digital Resources (menu on middle of the screen) or simply click @ <http://www.springerlink.com/>

Search Tips:

By default, searches on our site will return only results containing all words entered into the search box, without case sensitivity or spell-checking, and without regard to your access rights to the content.

Narrowing your results
Language and stemming
Operators
Advanced search

Start a new search
Phrase match " "
Wildcards

Narrowing your results:

1. Filter results by access

By default, search results are displayed without regard for your access rights to the content. If you would like to see only results to which you have access, uncheck the box labeled "Include preview-only content."

2. Facets

The facet boxes that display on the left side of the search results page are sets of characteristics that describe the current set of results, with the number next to each item indicating how many results match each characteristic. Selecting an item in a facet box will refine your search results so that only those results that fit the selected item remain. Click "see all" to view and select from all facet items for a particular facet.

Discipline	see all
Biomedical Sciences
Life Sciences	1.335
Medicine	1.112

3. Date Published

You can narrow your results by date by clicking "Date Published" at the top of your search results and entering different values in the date boxes.

The image shows a search filter interface. At the top, there is a dropdown menu labeled "Date Published" with a downward arrow. Below it, there is a "between" dropdown menu with a double-headed arrow. To the right of "between" are two input boxes: the first contains "2005" and the second contains "2012". Between these two boxes is the word "and". To the right of the "2012" box is a search icon (magnifying glass).

4. Search within a search

In order to search within a search, simply add keywords to any existing search terms in the keyword box at the top of the page and re-submit your search.

The image shows a search box with the text "wheat maize" entered. To the right of the text is a blue search icon (magnifying glass).

5. Start a new search

Search terms, facet selections, and date selections will remain as you narrow and expand a search until you click the button to "New search." Clicking this button will clear the search box and reset the search page to the default settings.

6. Language and stemming

Your search will return results that share the stem(s) of the words you enter in the search box based on your selected interface language. For example, if you have English selected as your interface language, a search for "running" will return matches that contain "runner", "run", "ran", and so on.

The image shows a search box with the text "running" entered. To the right of the text is a blue search icon (magnifying glass).

Changing the interface language will change the stemming language and can therefore change your search results.

7. Phrase match

A search with multiple terms entered within quotation marks ("" ) will return only results that contain those words or their stemmed variations in that exact order.

The image shows a search box with the text "single-walled carbon nanotubes" entered within quotation marks. To the right of the text is a blue search icon (magnifying glass).

8. Operators

- The OR operator (or |)

The OR operator (case-insensitive) allows results to be returned even when they contain only one of the words entered. For example wheat OR maize will give results which include either one of the terms "wheat" or "maize".

- The NOT operator

The NOT operator (case-insensitive) excludes results that contain the term following the NOT. For example wheat NOT maize will give results which include the term "wheat" but exclude the term "maize".

- The AND operator (or &)

The AND operator (case-insensitive) provides the same results as the default on our site. If you search for evolutionary patterns of families, the search that will actually be carried out will be (evolutionary AND patterns AND of AND families).

- The NEAR operators

The NEAR operator (case-insensitive) will return results where the search term on the left is within ten words of the word to the right of the NEAR operator. For example system NEAR testing will return results in which the word "system" is located within ten words of the word "testing", in either order.

A screenshot of a search interface. It features a light gray search box with a blue search button on the right. The search box contains the text "system NEAR testing".

The NEAR operator means the search terms on either side must both be near each other in the text and also appear in the order you've entered them in the search box.

You can narrow the ten-word range by including a forward slash and number along with the NEAR operator. For example information NEAR/4 systems will return results where the word "information" appears within four words of the term "systems".

- Precedence

If you include multiple operators in your search, they are interpreted in the following order of precedence: NOT, OR, AND. Operators work only on the words immediately before and after the operator (and for NOT, only the word after), so if you would like an entire phrase to be evaluated with the operator, put it in quotes.

Because two words without an operator between them are treated as an AND query by default, this means

plastic bottles OR water pollution

will be interpreted as

plastic AND (bottles OR water) AND pollution

instead of as the probably intended

"plastic bottles" OR "water pollution"

9. Wildcards

- The * Wildcard

An asterisk (*) entered as part of a search is interpreted as a substitute for any number of letters. For example, a search for hea\* will return results containing any word starting with "hea", such as "head", "heats", "health", "heated", "heating" and so on. The wildcard search works best when there are at least 3 characters before the wildcard operator.

A screenshot of a search bar with a light gray border. Inside the bar, the text "hea*" is entered. To the right of the text is a blue search button with a white magnifying glass icon.

- The ? Wildcard

A question mark (?) entered in a search is interpreted as a substitute for any single letter. For example, a search for hea? will return only results that contain four-letter words starting with "hea", such as "head", "heat", "heal", and so on. The wildcard search works best when there are at least 3 characters before the wildcard operator.

10. Advanced search

You can narrow your results by using the advanced search feature, which allows you to search for a DOI, Author or an exact phrase. It also allows you to refine your search even further by only returning results from a specific publication or date range.

Importing citations from Springer Link:

1. Search Springer Link against your Key words
2. Click on the title of the citation that you want to export
3. Click Export citations link which is circled in the picture below
4. Select reference manager (EndNote from the drop down list)
5. Save your citation on your desired destination.

The image shows two screenshots from Springer Link. The left screenshot is the article page for 'Genetic map locations for orthologous Vp1 genes in wheat and rice'. It includes the journal title 'Theoretical and Applied Genetics', the authors 'P. C. Bailey, R. S. McKibbin, J. R. Lenton, M. J. Holdsworth, J. E. Flinham, M. D. Gale', and an abstract. The 'Export citations' link in the 'Other actions' section is circled in red. The right screenshot is the 'Export Citation' dialog box, which shows a list of citation managers. The 'EndNote (RIS)' option is circled in red.

Note: Before importing the citation in endnote firstly you should create the endnote library on your system. If the endnote library not exists on your system than you have the option to save the file on your system.

If you experience difficulties using any of the online databases available in the Library please contact: library@umt.edu.pk Ext: 326 & 335.

Corrections & Clarifications

● "A Glimmer of Hope for India's Web Darling" (Technology, April 22-April 28, 2013) incorrectly cited Bloomberg data regarding MakeMyTrip's revenue. The article should have referred to fiscal year 2011 net revenue of $61 million, not consolidated revenue of $124 million. The company's net revenue is estimated to be $88.6 million in fiscal year 2013.

CORRECTIONS "The Hottest VCs Since Andreessen" [April 29] misstated the investment types that Formation 8 will avoid. While it plans to stay away from alternative-energy-production investments, it expects to invest in other energy-related companies. "The Second Coming of Facebook" [April 29] implied that Facebook's deals with international phone companies are tied to the distribution of its forthcoming Home software. The relationship with carriers is not strictly related to Home.
