

The Association of Departments of English

Keeping up with the tradition of enhancing academic quality and productive research engagement of faculty and students and in order to keep pace with the current global trends in the fields of literature and language, the Department of English and Literary Studies (DELS), ILA, is proud to announce the acquisition of prestigious membership of The Association of Departments of English (ADE). The efforts made towards achieving this milestone may not have been possible without the kind and continuous support of Accreditation and Academic Quality Improvement Cell (AAQIC), the Rector and the President, UMT. ADE is a part of MLA (Modern Language Association) Academic Program Services (MAPS) and provides opportunities and resources that help its members successfully lead and manage their academic programs or departments. The membership comes with advantages such as discounted registration for ADE Summer Seminars, annual gatherings including professional workshops, sessions, and discussion groups, professional development grants, discounted job postings in the MLA Job List, access to a network of peers through discussion lists, discounted consultancy and evaluation services, free online access to the searchable ADE Bulletin and ADFL Bulletin archives, immediate access through the ADE Web site to statements, reports, surveys, the searchable ADE member database, and a directory of PhD-granting departments. We hope that this involvement will prove beneficial for both the students and faculty of the department in connecting with intellectually and academically vibrant platforms and grow as successful scholars.
